Tower house

The nesting box you can keep a check on!

New for this spring is a turreted nesting box adapted to the birds' own habitat. With its angular rounded shape and unpainted wooden surface it is in harmony with its natural surroundings – and it ages beautifully as a result. With just a few simple moves it can be quickly transformed from a nesting box to a feeder. The food remains protected from rain and snow and spillage to the ground is minimized. Under the ceiling there is also space to attach a web camera – so that we can see what life is really like in a nesting box during spring with our own eyes.

The Tower house is made of solid and naturally coloured wood and is supplied together with a practical attachment block making it easy to take it down and clean. Just like the other nesting boxes in Wildlife Garden's range, the Tower house is equipped with ventilation holes and grooves so that young birds can climb up when it's time to leave the nest. Nothing has been left to chance.
